

I decided to go with a simple concept, using both the idea of digital and emotional connections. I wanted a short motion graphic that communicated the idea of somebody logging in to a computer and starting a conversation online, presumably with a long distance friend.

I kept my storyboard simple, but ended up removing the 'loading' text and avoiding actual words in my video. I also skipped the scene of the chat program being clicked on, as I wasn't sure how to transition into it, and it felt like three scenes flowed better.

Final video: <https://streamable.com/b0d1ju>